LOCAL AND GENERAL NEWS.

Charles W. Logan no More. The funeral of the late Charles W. Logan, who died on May 2 at 411 North Water street, will take place from St. John's church on Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, Rev. Montgomery M. Goodwin officiating. The deceased leaves a widow and two children, a son and daughter. He was aged about 35 years, and had been in poor health for a number of months. He was formerly a passenger conductor on the old Illinois Midland railway and until incapacitated by ill health traveled through the South in the interest of the Travellers' Life Insurance company. The deceased was a distant relative of the late Gen. John A. Logan and was a man of exceptional business qualifications. He had hosts of personal friends in various parts of the country.

The Governor at St. Louis. Gov. Fifer and his staff left Springfield last night for St. Louis to inspect the new bridge over the river at that place to-day. The Illinoisans were received by Governor Francis of Missouri, and the mayor and citizens of St. Louis. There were speeches on the bridge at noon, and there will be a banquet in St. Louis that evening. The Governor will probably leave St. Louis on Sunday or Monday night for Chicago, to attend the Republican conference to be held there next Tuesday. Many other prominent Republicans from Springfield and from central and southern Illinois will also be in Chicago on Tuesday.

"Chickens Coming Home," Etc.
There is one feature of the Iowa liquor case that ought and doubtless will command the serious attention of the Prohibitionists. It was a Democratic Chief Justice who delivered the opinion which dealt such a whack at the sacred doctrine of state rights, and placed the supreme power of the nation above the "local police power of a state," and a Chief Justice besides appointed by Grover Cleveland, who owed his power to appoint judges to the indirect help of the prohibitionists of New York. We hope they are pleased with their work.

The ten months just ended of the fiscal year have, on the ordinary method of treasury book-keeping, reduced the public debt to the extent of $9,000,000. The interest-bearing debt, however, which is the only part of the national obligations which the country feels, has been cut down much more than this figure.

Globe-Democrat: When Speaker Reed said to Mr. Mills the other day, "The gentlemen from Texas will please be in order," he expressed the general feeling of the people. That is to say, they are always ready to endorse a suggestion that Roger Q. should shut up.

As corn continues to steadily advance in price so the hopes of Democratic success by reason of the disaffection of the farmers go a-glimmering. That party is the only political organization that always profits by great calamities. A destructive flood, an untimely frost, anything that entails general suffering upon the people, is a perfect godsend to that party. It looks on calamity and gets rich on public loss. It becomes bankrupt on general prosperity and goes to the wall whenever everybody is happy. Strange party, that, but it has a way been thus.

The New York Press, under the heading, "Senator Cullon's Commercial Report," has this to say editorially on Senator Cullon's report on the relations of railroads in this country and Canada:

The impossibility of competing with others in the work done by other railroads do is something that the average Democrat or non-Democrat seems equally unable to grasp, whether the subject of discussion is manufacturers, a rail establishment, or transportation facilities. That we can afford to let loose from them as to our international economy, and develop our own resources ought to be plain. That we must more or less estimate them in our external and international economy ought to be equally plain. It is, however, the railroads that the same argument would apply to, viz., widely varying conditions of our national growth and activity. It would be wise to insist that because bread is good to eat and books are good to read, therefore we should wear nothing made of books and live in houses built of bread.

Senator Cullon's report on the relations of our railroads and those of Canada goes to, to enforce the importance of placing American transportation on a national competitive basis, as far as possible. The conditions that compel such competition are the fact that certain Canadian roads enter our own boundaries without being subject to our own interstate commerce laws. The Senator is, we believe, in favor of the application of the long and short haul clauses to Canadian lines to our own country, but he evidently does not think that this need be insisted upon. The Canadian lines are subsidized by their own government, and connecting also with heavily subsidized steamship lines from Vancouver and St. John, the western and eastern termini respectively of the Canadian Pacific.

The Senator's report makes two things clear: We cannot compete with British subsidized transportation lines across this continent and across the Pacific Ocean without subsidized steamship lines of our own, and so far as the competition of overland roads is concerned, the road is concerned, it is important, whatever else be done, that their independence be established as far as possible by the development of local traffic by industrial diversity, and the distribution of domestic centers of production on the widest possible scale. The facts of the case present a doublebarreled argument for the Republican position as to commerce.

Mrs. McAfee Surprised.

On May 1st, 1880, at the birth of her daughter, Mrs. Sarah McAfee, and a short distance west of River, Mrs. Sarah McAfee was suddenly surprised by her friends and neighbors, Mrs. McAfee being in her 80th year. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. David Sted, Mr. and Mrs. John Williams, Mr. and Mrs. John Dellidre, Mrs. Nancy Sted, Mrs. Anna W. Hains, Mrs. John Bowman, Misses Bell & Sted, Florence Sted, Mrs. Bowman, Mrs. Anna Sted, Ada Barker and Master Charlie Sted. Others who were invited were unable to attend, account of the busy season. At one o'clock, the men and women gathered together, and a festive meal was had by all. The party was spent in social enjoyment, the older people talking and enjoying themselves in various ways, while the young folks enjoyed themselves in various games. When the time came to depart, the guests had to fare themselves away, after wishing Grandma many returns of the happy day. A G. G.
